Climate Change: Investors and Financial Institutions

Impacts of climate change can have significant effects on investments by introducing previously unforeseen risks. Policies to restrain climate change can also affect investments. However, opportunities are likely to open up in fields such as renewable energy and energy efficiency.