On behalf of the University of Cambridge Institute for Sustainability Leadership (CISL), I am delighted to welcome you to The Prince of Wales's Business & Sustainability Programme. On behalf of the University of Cambridge Institute for Sustainability Leadership (CISL), I am delighted to welcome you to this senior executives' seminar in The Prince of Wales's Business & Sustainability Programme.

CISL has been working for over 25 years with business leaders, policymakers and civil society leaders, helping them to understand and address the critical global challenges that we face and convert their enhanced knowledge and networks into a powerful tool for leadership.

The Business & Sustainability Programme is now in its 24th year, with seminars run annually in Cambridge, Cape Town and Melbourne. A distinguishing feature of the Programme is the diverse group of senior decision-makers that attend, and the time and space offered by the Programme to engage with peers, leading experts and practitioners in a productive environment.

We trust that you will have a tremendous experience over the next few days, benefiting from new ideas and challenges from the formal parts of the Programme, as well as insight and inspiration from your fellow participants. You are joining a global community of over 8,000 alumni, representing over 1,000 organisations in 75 countries. We sincerely hope that you will continue as an active participant in the CISL network in the years to come and I look forward to supporting your contribution to sustainability leadership.
